Hello everyone,

Great news, finally my latest novel, GOODBYE, MERSEY VIEW, is to be published early in December, just in time for Christmas! It picks up the story of the GIRLS FROM MERSEY VIEW, close friends Monica and Joan, as well as Joan's half-sister Annabella (known as Bella) and Monica's younger sister Eileen, not forgetting their parents, friends and neighbours in the tight-knit community of Everton just as World War II breaks out. The book follows their journey through the next eventful and life-changing six years, the latter of which Lily (Joan's aunt and a complete law-unto-herself!) and her little family spend in neutral Portugal which I hope adds a different perspective on events.

The reason it's taken me such a long time to complete is that I've been suffering ill health for most of this year. Nothing to worry terribly about, thank God, but very debilitating and sometimes depressing. As I keep saying, 'It's not a lot of fun, this getting old!' In fact, both my husband Bob and I have a big birthday next year, we'll both be 80 – heavens, I never thought I'd still be capable of writing books at such a ripe old age! We're hoping to get across to Southport for the occasion, to celebrate with family and friends, as we don't seem to get off the Isle of Man as much these days as we used to – again, it's an age thing but also dependent a great deal on the weather! Still, the Isle of Man Steam Packet Company is expecting delivery of a brand new ferry next year (all the way from South Korea) so that should improve things.

I do hope you enjoy GOODBYE, MERSEY VIEW and wish you all a very Happy Christmas and a peaceful and healthy New Year.

Sincerely,
Lyn Andrews
